Calhoun condenses schedule to save gas

By Bayne Hughes
DAILY Education Writer
hughes@decaturdaily.com · 340-2432

Gas prices are affecting Calhoun Community College's class schedule.

Theresa Hamilton, vice president of instruction and student services, is changing the spring semester schedule at the Decatur campus so a student can attend classes as few as one day a week. Gas prices are hovering between $2.79 and $2.89 a gallon.

She is consolidating Monday, Wednesday and Friday day classes to Monday and Wednesday. Class periods will expand from 50 minutes to 75 minutes. Each class earns a student three credit hours for a semester.

Calhoun will then begin offering 1 hour, 50 minute classes on Friday mornings at 8 and 11.
